Linear feet: 22 feet, 5 inches
Approximate number of pages: 40,000

William B. Ewald signed an instrument of gift for the papers on December 12, 1983. Literary rights in the unpublished writings of William B. Ewald in this collection and in all other collections of papers received by the United States government have been donated to the public. Under terms of the instrument of gift, the following classes of items are withheld from research use:

1. Papers which constitute an invasion of personal privacy or a libel of a living person.

2. Papers which are required to be kept secret in the interest of national defense or foreign policy, and are properly classified.
SCOLE AND CONTENT NOTE

William Bragg Ewald was born in Chicago, IL, on December 8, 1925. His father was active in the Missouri Republican Party. Ewald received a B.A. from Washington University in St. Louis, Missouri in 1946, and earned an M.A. and later a Ph.D. in English from Harvard University in 1947 and 1951, respectively. He taught at Harvard and wrote several books on literary topics before joining the Eisenhower administration staff in September, 1954, as a Special Assistant. During his time in the White House, Ewald researched and wrote presidential speeches and messages under Bryce Harlow. His 1977 oral history (in the Eisenhower Presidential Library) provides extensive information on the White House period.

Ewald left the White House in the fall of 1956 to become Assistant to the Secretary of the Interior, a position which he held until 1961, though in 1959 he took a year off to go abroad on an Eisenhower Exchange Fellowship. Ewald was one of a number of administration staffers who worked on the Nixon campaign in 1960. In 1961, he joined IBM where he remained until 1988. Shortly after going to work for IBM, he was asked to assist in preparing Dwight D. Eisenhower’s memoirs. For the next four years, Ewald and John S. D. Eisenhower collaborated with Dwight D. Eisenhower on the writing of his two-volume memoir of the presidency, \textit{The White House Years (Mandate for Change and Waging Peace)}, which was to be published by Doubleday. The team experimented with various methods of working, but eventually settled on a system in which Ewald and John S.D. Eisenhower researched original documents and wrote research drafts. They would then discuss the drafts with Dwight D. Eisenhower while taking notes. The amended draft would then be reviewed by Dwight D. Eisenhower and prepared for the Doubleday editors, who would in turn suggest corrections and clarifications. Ewald and John S.D. Eisenhower would then work on resolving issues raised by Doubleday. For those desiring further information about the writing process, William B. Ewald’s oral history is recommended.

During his later years with IBM, Ewald published a number of books pertaining to the Eisenhower Administration. Drafts of \textit{Eisenhower the President, Who Killed Joe McCarthy?} and \textit{McCarthyism and Consensus} form a substantial part of the Ewald collection. Ewald felt that Eisenhower’s reputation as president had been battered by various biographers and political writers in ways that Eisenhower himself could not effectively rebut for a host of reasons. In 1967, he began work on a history of the Eisenhower presidency based on his unique experiences working in the White House and on Eisenhower’s memoirs; in the prologue of \textit{Eisenhower the President}, he also credits Eisenhower himself and numerous interviews with other administration stalwarts and personal friends of Eisenhower.
SERIES LIST

SERIES 1: SPEECH FILES, 1954-1956. This series consists primarily of files of notes, background, and drafts for speeches given by President Eisenhower. The bulk of the material dates from 1954. A typical file contains notes and drafts of the speech in development and as given. Some files also contain correspondence or background material. A few files consist of background material only, and others contain materials regarding presidential messages. The “Department of State” file contains materials related to Ewald’s year abroad on an Eisenhower Exchange Fellowship.

SERIES 2: MANUSCRIPTS AND FILES CREATED AS ASSISTANT TO DDE, 1961-65. This series primarily consists of drafts of the two volumes of The White House Years: Mandate for Change and Waging Peace. The files involving the latter book include research drafts for a number of chapters. Five contemporaneous articles by DDE which Ewald may have assisted in writing are also included, as are files related to the business aspects of Ewald’s position, miscellaneous source materials, correspondence and book reviews.

SERIES 3: WRITINGS ON THE EISENHOWER PRESIDENCY, ca. 1967- ca. 1985. This series consists primarily of drafts of three books written by Ewald on the Eisenhower presidency: Eisenhower the President, Who Killed Joe McCarthy? and McCarthyism and Consensus. Other material found in the series includes correspondence and galley proofs of The Memoirs of Earl Warren. The bulk of the material relates to Eisenhower the President.

The chronological order of the drafts of Eisenhower the President: Crucial Days, 1951-1960 was impossible to ascertain with certainty, due to the fragmentary nature of the undated drafts, and the many substantive revisions to the structure of the text. When possible, complete drafts were kept together. Individual drafts have been assigned letter designations by the arranger in an attempt to make them less confusing. The letter designations do not necessarily reflect the chronological order in which the drafts were created. When it was not possible to identify individual drafts, chapters have been grouped.

The book appears to have been originally organized around descriptions of Dwight D. Eisenhower’s relationships with various individuals (for instance, “Ike and Joe McCarthy”). This conclusion is borne out by Ewald’s prologue to the published work, in which he states that he first wrote a summary piece called, “Of Ike and Myths and History”. This was later altered to a year-by-year format, and finally into a format arranged chronologically by significant dates.
