Literary rights in the unpublished papers of Arthur S. Flemming have been transferred to the people of the United States.

By agreement with the donor the following classes of documents will be withheld from research use:

1. Papers and other historical material the disclosure of which would constitute an invasion of personal privacy or a libel of a living person.

2. Papers and other historical materials that are specifically authorized under criteria established by statute or Executive Order to be kept secret in the interest of national defense or foreign policy, and are in fact properly classified pursuant to such statute or Executive Order.
The Papers of Arthur S. Flemmming were deposited with the Eisenhower Library in two major accessions. The first and largest accession arrived in 1986 and contained materials from Flemmming’s early civil service career through the mid-1970s. The second accession arrived in late 1996. It more or less takes up where the first accession leaves off but there are a couple exceptions that must be noted. The second accession contains a few files from the early 1960s, which were probably held back at the time of the first shipment because they were still relevant to Flemmming’s activities at the time, namely files related to aging. The other exception is that Flemmming’s activities during the 1970s are not documented well in either shipment. This suggests that portions of his papers were lost or came to some other ill end. But there is no other evidence to imply such a fate. A more plausible explanation is that Flemmming was not as heavily engaged during that decade as he was before and after and therefore did not accumulate as many personal files. Alternatively, his activities during the 1970s were not anchored to a particular organization with the support staff to collect and manage his papers. Hopefully the correct explanation is one of the latter two or perhaps a combination of them.

Arthur S. Flemmming had a long and illustrious career in the fields of education and government. He also took an active part in many political, professional, and religious organizations and from the 1960s on organizations advocating social and political change. During a great portion of Flemmming’s active life he was engaged in what his wife Bernice has called extracurricular activities (usually more than one at any given time) in addition to his work. During the 1930s and 1940s he frequently held more than one job at a time. Sometimes, though not always, the documentation of Flemmming’s activities for a given period of time was maintained by one individual/office at a single location. Even though Flemmming often had a principal office that changed numerous times throughout his career his activities/involvements often times did not. As might be imagined, in their original state, the Flemmming Papers consisted of many units of material with little or no physical cohesion. For the sake of organizing Flemmming’s papers into a useable body of material some liberties were taken with the original arrangement. A major example being the combining of disparate correspondence and general subject files compiled over a period of several decades.

Flemmming was born and grew up in Kingston, New York, the son of a prominent attorney who also was a member of the Methodist Church and the Republican Party. In the fall of 1923 Flemmming entered Ohio Wesleyan after spending his first year out of high school working as a cub reporter for The Freeman, Kingston’s local newspaper. His decision to attend Ohio Wesleyan was influenced greatly by a local high school mathematics teacher and graduate of Wesleyan. In 1927 Flemmming graduated with a degree in political science and then wrestled with whether to follow his father’s footsteps into law, go into the ministry as had his grandfather, or look into a public service career as exemplified by his college professor and mentor Dr. Ben A. Arneson. In many respects he did all three and then some.

Flemmming eventually decided to enroll in the American University Graduate School where he taught college debate in the University’s undergraduate College of Liberal Arts and received a master’s degree in political science after one year. His move to Washington also began a long relationship with Foundry United Methodist Church.

In the summer of 1928 Flemming went to England under a scholarship sponsored by the English Speaking Union which included travel and visiting the homes of high-ranking government officials. In the fall he enrolled in law school and received his degree in 1933. Then, instead of sitting for the bar exam he became the first director of the School of Public Affairs at American University. This position brought Flemming to the attention of educators and public servants in the field of public administration in and outside of Washington and resulted in his nomination for the Republican seat on the Civil Service Committee (CSC) in June of 1939.

During most of the 1940s Flemming was chiefly preoccupied with the Civil Service Commission except for ancillary positions which came to him as a result of being one of its commissioners and involving him in war manpower programs, personnel management, and labor issues. The responsibilities brought on by the war and its aftermath, including the loyalty and security issue, were immense and did not leave him time for any major undertaking other than his perennial interest in the church, where he became an exponent for the active involvement of the church in the social, economic, and political issues confronting the country.

In 1947, one year before Flemming left the CSC, President Harry S. Truman appointed him to the Commission on Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government, commonly known as the Hoover Commission after its chairman former President Herbert Hoover. Most materials documenting these activities are located in the Agency and Organizational Records Series with scattered items in the Names and Subject File Series. Flemming’s work with the CSC and the Hoover Commission are documented extensively but there is little material on his earlier life and work.

When Flemming left the CSC in 1948 he severed his relationship with Federal service except for his work with the Hoover Commission and became president of Ohio Wesleyan University. While at Wesleyan he accepted a concurrent position with the National Council of Churches of Christ in America. In 1953 Flemming took a leave of absence from Wesleyan to join the administration of Dwight Eisenhower as a member of the Second Hoover Commission and the President’s Advisory Commission on Government Organization (PACGO) but primarily as Director of the Office of Defense Mobilization (ODM). Flemming left ODM in 1957 to resume his duties at Wesleyan, until a year later when he returned to Washington to serve as Eisenhower’s Secretary of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. The documentation for these activities is uneven with the Second Hoover Commission and PACGO faring the best.

With the end of the Eisenhower Administration Flemming left the Federal service once more and returned to education becoming president of the University of Oregon and remaining there until 1967. During the first couple years Flemming was also on contract with Good Housekeeping to write a monthly column. Most of columns related to issues he dealt with as Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare such as fluoridation of water. Flemming had many other outside activities while at Oregon including work with various boards, commissions, and councils such as the National Council of Churches. Flemming eventually became president of the organization during the waning years of the decade. Flemming’s involvement with the Council and his relationship with Good Housekeeping are substantially documented but his other activities at Oregon are not.

When Flemming departed Oregon he took over the presidency of Macalester College. There is virtually no documentation related to his stay at Macalester though earlier files contain references to the college when Flemming served on its governing board. His stay at Macalester was a disappointment which may explain the dearth of material. Upon leaving Macalester Flemming returned to the Federal service and set upon a “new crusade” on behalf of the elderly that would be a focal point for the remainder of his life. Flemming began his crusade as chairman of the White House Conference on Aging and then served a short stint as White House Consultant on Aging for President Richard Nixon before Nixon appointed him as U.S. Commissioner on Aging. Also during the Nixon Administration Flemming became chairman of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, which he held until President Ronald Reagan replaced him in 1982. That, however, did not remove Flemming from national policy making or the national spotlight. He continued his civil rights crusade with the Citizen’s Commission on Civil Rights but more importantly he focused more time on issues of the elderly. Flemming became involved in numerous organizations including the Save our Security Coalition as co-chairman with William Cohen, the Supplemental Security Income Modernization Project, the Commission on Aging, the National Committee on Careers for Older Americans, and the National Council on Aging to name a few. This collection documents Flemming’s involvement with various issues during this period including health, poverty, or social security though the quantity and detail varies from one crusade to another.

Flemming’s papers are divided into four series. Three of them, the Name and Subject File Series, the Agency and Organization Records Series, and the Personal Files Series were created from the initial accession. The second accession makes up the fourth, the National Council of Senior Citizens Series.

SERIES DESCRIPTION

Box Nos. Series

1-30 I. NAME AND SUBJECT FILE SERIES. 1939-1975. 30 boxes.

This series contains individual, institutional, subject, and miscellaneous correspondence files in one alphabetical arrangement. The nucleus of this series is a large body of material created and organized while Flemming was President of the University of Oregon between 1961 and 1968. Correspondence files from other periods were brought together to compile this series.

A high percentage of the documentation is routine correspondence such as expressions of congratulation, employment inquiries, letters of recommendation and transmittal letters. The more substantive material on such topics as politics and national policy issues is sprinkled throughout the series as noted in the container list.

30-183 II. AGENCY AND ORGANIZATION RECORDS SERIES. 1939-1978. 152 boxes.

This series consists of materials acquired by Flemming in the course of employment with or service to various governmental agencies and private organizations. The documentation varies greatly but may consist of budget and financial statements, meeting minutes, and administrative records.

Information on the committees and organizations with which Flemming was associated is located in the folder “Committees and Organizations.” It is believed the information was compiled while Flemming was at the University of Oregon and probably represents his associations during that period.

In most cases information provided in the container list is sufficient to guide research in this series. The remaining comments pertain to selected agencies and organizations and their materials where additional guidance seems warranted.

The files of the Citizenship Clearing House date from 1948 to June 1961. In July 1961 it became the National Center for Education in Politics (NCEP) and documentation from then through December 1966 is located under NCEP. In addition to routine documentation this file contains correspondence with major US foundations and material related to fund raising activities.

The meeting files of the Commission on Civil Rights (CCR) contain routine administrative material as well as material on policy issues and programs, such as prison reform, Indian affairs, women’s rights, education, employment, immigration, athletics, migrant and resident season farm workers, housing problems for minorities, reproductive freedom, housing, employment discrimination, little league baseball, prison inmate rights, and bilingual/bicultural education.

The material documenting Flemming’s tenure as Secretary of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare largely consists of a reading file of personal outgoing correspondence with occasional incoming items. Most of the correspondence is addressed to members of the general public but it also includes letters to friends, acquaintances, associates, members of Congress, and members of Flemming’s staff. The correspondence, except where noted otherwise, is routine in nature.

The general correspondence files for the National Council of Churches of Christ (NCCC) include internal, incoming, and outgoing correspondence, and office memoranda. The files contain documentation related to its divisions and other program units. The files for 1958-1961 contain a particularly large quantity of material on programs of the Division of Christian Life and Work and the Department of the Church and Economic Life. Unit records are fairly rich in documentation on programs under their administration. Unfortunately some division names, such as Division of Christian Life and Mission, give little indication of their program responsibilities.

Files of the General Board and Office of General Secretary contain NCCC memoranda, material distributed to NCCC membership, financial statements, General Board resolutions, General Board Minutes, minutes of the Executive Committee of the General board, annual reports, incoming and outgoing correspondence, and press releases. Where documentation contains brief information on a broad range of issues too numerous to cite in folder annotations, the type of document is cited in lieu of subject content.

183-251 III. PERSONAL FILES SERIES. 1939-1975. 69 boxes.

A. Articles, Lectures, Publications, and Miscellaneous Records Subseries. 1939-1975. 32 boxes.

This subseries contains daily and monthly appointment books; honors and awards; personal, legal, and financial records; family and business correspondence; a biography of Flemming by his wife Bernice; itineraries; serial publications; material related to articles written by Flemming for publication that includes drafts, correspondence from readers, and background material; lecture notes and background material; class rosters; student papers; and correspondence related to invitations declined by Flemming. Most of the invitations are requests for him to speak but other types are also included. The background materials used by Flemming in his articles and lectures include information on social problems and policy issues from federal and other governmental agencies especially the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

B. Engagements Subseries. 1939-1975. 35 boxes.

This subseries consists primarily of letters, memorandum, travel and lodging reservations, schedules, and other documents related to arranging Flemming’s speaking engagements, interviews, radio addresses, inspection trips, board meetings, and conferences. Flemming’s speeches and other remarks can be found in the form of handwritten outlines, full text reading copies, press release copies, published versions, or transcripts. They are frequently available during the 1940s, less so in the 1950s, and even less frequent in the 1960s. Full text versions become scarce during the latter years as Flemming adopted the practice of speaking from notes. There are a couple instances where the folder title contains a speech title but that is no indication the folder contains the text of the speech. Once in a while a folder will contain documentation relating to an entire event.

Most engagements during the 1940s are of an official government nature but scattered throughout are personal engagements such as church functions. The files for this period on a rare occasion contain documents submitted by members of the CSC staff for use by ASF in speech preparation. There are no engagement files for the period November 1948 through January 1951 or for the period January 26, 1953 through February 1, 1961.

Folder titles do not always reflect the correct or full title of an organization or location. Neither are they always consistent in format. Some minor alterations have been made to the original titles such as in the case of confusing abbreviations. Otherwise original titles have been preserved.

Occasionally the files contain information about organizations, institutions, or event locations. Because information of this kind is thought to be of limited interest it has not been reported in the subject annotations. Researchers are nevertheless encouraged to consult the appropriate files if they desire material of this nature. There are some instances where the engagement files contain subject matter, articles or other similar items. In the interest of limiting the size of this guide identification of such material has been limited to only subject matter that could not be deduced from the title of the file.

Occasionally a speech can be found in more than one engagement folder if it was given more than once or used in the preparation of another speech. There are a few engagement files that contain nothing but a reference to another file or folder. In most cases they are not part of the Flemming papers.

This series is so named because the National council of Senior Citizens held Flemming’s files towards the end of his career and may, in fact, have done so throughout the 1980s and 1990s.

Aside from an occasional subject file and a few generic document files this series consists of organization files. In most cases Flemming actively participated in the affairs of the organizations represented. In a few instances he may have had only a corresponding relationship or simple an interest in the organization’s work. The files document the work of the organizations but there is little regarding Flemming’s contribution. The quantity of documentation varies from a small folder to several boxes.

Some organization files consist of information packets given to board members in advance of meetings. Such packets might contain memoranda, agenda, financial reports, minutes of the previous meeting, discussion papers, news clippings related to the organization, and other material designed to keep board members informed. In addition to packets there may be correspondence, press advisories, and printed materials distributed by the organization. Some organization files, especially those with substantial documentation are arranged by date received, which may in some cases coincide with document date. Other times, when documents were received in packets, it does not. The original arrangement of the large organization files was largely retained.

The remaining comments pertain to files where additional guidance is warranted beyond the information provided in the container list.

Materials located in the so called “Binders” were received in several pocket folders forming case files and consist of articles, speeches, interviews, and awards related to Flemming. The material was arranged in rough chronological order. No attempt has been made to modify the original order other than in the case of a few instances of gross misplacement.

The collection of “Hearings” consists largely of transcripts and outlines of Flemming’s testimony and occasionally material probably used as background for the preparation of his remarks. There is also a small quantity of correspondence sprinkled throughout the files. Subject content is noted by reference to the committee or subcommittee before which the testimony was given and where necessary a brief statement of the matter under discussion. These files are arranged in reverse chronological order. Not infrequently Flemming testified more than once on the same issue and sometimes testimony given on one occasion is found with later testimony as background material. These files occasional contain testimony given by other individuals and reports by the Congressional Research Service. Drafts of Flemming’s testimony are rare and his handwritten outlines even rarer.
The “Reading File” folders contain correspondence by Flemming on institutional and personal letterheads. Occasionally he used his personal letterhead to write on behalf of organizations. Container list annotations reflect the organization on whose behalf Flemming wrote or the subject matter of the correspondence. There are personal letters of condolence, recommendation, and congratulation; acknowledgments for contributions; letters of reference; and grant applications. The file also contains correspondence related to Flemming’s appearances at conferences and other events and awards he received. This file includes correspondence on policy issues to elected officials. Correspondence for the years 1991 through 1993 is missing.

The “Travel” files are uneven in content. Files for the early years contain itineraries and various travel records. Files for later years additionally contain material related to the events Flemming attended including invitations, promotional materials, and program schedules. Occasionally Flemming’s staff provided demographic information regarding the locality he was visiting.
